WHY BUY IN MINNESOTA?

Few states have a greater wealth of strong Shorthorn herds than does Minnesota. Breeders in this state have consistently been buyers of top American and imported sires and have always been alert to the advantages of adding top females to their herds. Minnesota Shorthorns sell in the upper brackets wherever offered and the fact that buyers keep coming back for more is a good indication that they have met the toughest test possible . . . satisfying buyers with their performance.

A GOOD TIME TO BUY SHORTHORN FEMALES

The cattle industry is undergoing a significant change. With the formation of many large feedlots in the West, fewer feeder calves are coming into the midwest from traditional western sources of supply. This means that farmers and feedlot operators must look to midwestern, eastern and south-eastern producers for more feeders.

Minnesota, Dakota, Iowa and surrounding states have a great opportunity to put rough land and excess roughages to use in cow-calf programs. There is a growing and profitable market for these calves and an expanding market for breeding stock as more farmers form and enlarge their beef cow herds. The Shorthorn cow, with her docility, superior milking ability, freedom from dwarfism and cancer eye, and her unequalled ability to convert cheaper feeds and roughages into extra pounds of beef, is best able to make your cow-calf program a profitable one.

Buy your bulls and females in this sale or contact any of the Minnesota Shorthorn Ass'n officers and they will be glad to help you find Shorthorns at private treaty.

Maybloom 37th
Roan, University of Minn.

Shorthorn feeder calves sell for premium prices. In the 1960 Virginia Feeder Sales, Shorthorns outsold white-faces and blacks by $10.67 a calf. The Mobridge, Mandan, Gregory, and Billings sales in 1961 indicated the great demand for Shorthorns and Shorthorn crossbred calves.

At left are Charles, Gary, Collette and Loraine Augustine with four steers, all by Fontana Benbow, that averaged $211 in the 1960 Austin Club Calf Sale. Shorthorn steers are in great demand as club calves and Minnesota breeders have three sales in which good red, white, and roan calves are offered each fall . . . Austin, New Ulm, and Ada. Why not get on the band wagon and sell those heavier, superior profit-making Shorthorn calves?
